Special Bargains in SILK UMBRELLAS
this week.

To-day the thirty-fifth anniversary of the admission of California to the Union in 1850 will be appropriately celebrated by the Sons and Daughters of the State.

The celebration will close on the 9th, the exact date of admission, and parades, oratory, and fireworks will mark the enthusiasm with which the early days are recalled. Governor Markham is, of course, the official head of the festivities.

The programme for the week continues in the same attractive manner, but each day adds new features in the way of fine novelties at our store.

GONE WOOL-GATHERING.

The "Register's" Remarkable Find in the Dark Hills of Monroe.

WOOL PRICES HOPPING HIGH.

The Leading Dealers in This Locality Submit Three Liberal Offers in Behalf of the Democratic Campaign Fund—A Rare Chance to Bolster up a Cause That Has Played Itself Out.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

Sir:—When we saw in the Register of to-day the flaming headlines "Effect of Free Wool" and then read the remarkable article that follows, we at first decided to pay no attention to so absurd a statement as that wool is selling in Monroe county, Ohio, at 23 cents a pound and that one grower of that county had been paid 26 cents a pound for his clip. We concluded that the sheep editor of the Register had gone crazy or that somebody was lying, or both. As it is evident that someone must be appointed guardian of the Register, out of our long standing friendship for that newspaper we concluded to try to set it right before it goes clean off the handle.

Now as to fact—no more fiction—as Puck said in one of its cartoons with regard to Blaine, "He thinks I believe him"—we take it for granted that when the Register speaks of wool it means fleece—washed, the standard on which our quotations are based, and not scoured wool. If scoured wool be meant, the Monroe county producer is not getting enough; for a basis of 17 cents a pound and 52 per cent shrinkage he should get 35 cents a pound, the current price paid here now for scoured wool.

If it is the wool that was bought from the Register's "prominent Monroe county farmer" somebody cheated him out of 9 cents a pound. We trust that the Register would be too honest to rob the poor wool grower of 9 cents a pound on his product for the mere sake of hood-winking those of its readers who are supposed to know nothing about wool except what they find in the Register. The Register certainly can not refer to Saxon or Silurian wool, for that there are not over 10,000 or 15,000 pounds grown in the three states of Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, as compared with more than three hundred millions of pounds of wool of all kinds grown in the United States.

If it be these fancy wools that the Register is dealing in, we can furnish it with more and better quotations on this line. For instance, John G. Clark, of Washington county, recently sold his Saxon wool to us for 30 cents, 4 cents higher than the highest price the Register knows of. We bought some other clips of similar wools, but not quite so choice, in the same neighborhood for 29 cents. Without going so far from home, Ridge Jacobs, of West Liberty, still holds a clip of 600 fleeces for which he wants 40 cents, and we stand ready to pay him within a few cents of his asking price. Last year we paid him either 45 or 46 cents. But how many of these fancy clips are there? The Register certainly did not intend to base its quotations on these few fancy clips.

We are surprised when the Register goes to Monroe county, Ohio, for its market quotations, for Wheeling is recognized everywhere as the wool market of this whole region. We ourselves handle three million pounds a year. The farmers who read the Register would hardly be so foolish as to ship their product to this market after hearing so much better news from Woodsfield.

We beg to suggest to the Register that hereafter, instead of sending to us every week for wool quotations, which we have tried to furnish honestly, it send to Monroe county, Ohio, and be careful to say no more that the quotations are furnished by Horkheimer Bros.

It is true that recently some wools have been sold in this market at 20 cents, but that was prior to the passage of the tariff bill, and this price was paid only on the belief that the bill would not pass. Since then buyers in this immediate belt have been a scarce article at over 17 cents, and this for washed wools, as everybody knows who knows anything about the wool business. It is an established fact that the Panhandle counties are the banner fine wool counties, while Monroe county wool is hardly a fair average.

We know whereof we speak, as we have recently had a hundred thousand pounds from Monroe county and it did not cost us over 10¢ cents. There must be some Democratic farmers in Monroe county who are scratching their heads on account of the wool situation. We understand that it is not hard to strike a Democrat in that particular locality.

If the Register will refer to its files of last year it will find that one of its correspondents referred to us as "monopolists" and "bunco-stealers" because we paid 20 cents for unwashed West Virginia wool. Some honest Democratic farmers took the hint and held their wool over, selling it this year at 15 cents, causing the Democratic party and their bad advisers. Is it the intention of the Register to try to give its wool growing friends another such deal this year?

If the Register's wool quotations are given out in the interest of some political scheme to which it has been put up—if the article has nothing to do with legitimate trade as it is ordinarily understood among business men—we shall be glad to help it out to an extent that should be very inviting in those times of hard Democratic campaigning. In this accommodating spirit we submit the following proposition, which we think will strike the unprejudiced as liberal:

(1) If the Register will furnish us a purchaser at 26 cents for our holdings in Wheeling we will permit the buyer to retain and deliver to the Democratic campaign fund the sum of $35,000. Or, realizing that the Register quotations may have declined 3 cents over night—

(2) We will sell our holdings in Wheeling at 23 cents and will permit the buyer to retain and deliver to the Democratic campaign fund the sum of $18,000. Or, if the Register people are speculatively inclined—

(3) We will sell to the Register speculators 600,000 pounds of wool, guaranteed to be fully as good as the average Monroe county wool, at 20 cents. To facilitate the deal we will furnish the purchaser storage and insurance for three months free, and all we ask is 5 cents a pound margin on the purchase. For the residue we will charge the purchaser 4 per cent per annum for the time that we carry the wool. This should be a very attractive proposition, and we would be very glad if the Register's wool export can command the his offices to No. 1515 Chapline street, opp. Paxton Fountain and western entrance to Court House. Ground floor. Telephone 581.

nerve to close this deal with us and enjoy the profits—or give them to the Democratic campaign fund, as he may feel disposed.

In presenting these propositions the only condition we impose is that each party shall place in any depository the Register may name the sum of $10,000 for the faithful performance of contract, the same to be forfeited by the party failing to comply with the terms of the contract.

If the Register is interested in giving honest wool quotations, it has only to call at our office and get the offerings we have had from Monroe, Guernsey and adjoining counties within the past twenty-four hours. They may not fit the Register theory, but they show the exact state of the wool market in those counties. HORKHEIMER BROS. Wheeling, W. Va., Sept. 6, 1894.

ANCHOR INSURANCE COMPANY

Closed on Judgments Issued by the Circuit Court This Week.

The INTELLIGENCER announced this week the lessing of two attachments against the Anchor Fire and Marine Insurance Company, of this city, by the circuit court. One, for $452 was in favor of Felix Saloman & Co., of Springfield, Mass., and one for $1,059.50 of J. K. Dexter & Co., of the same place. These were issued on affidavit of their attorney, S. G. Smith, as follows:

The affiant, S. G. Smith, says that the Anchor Fire and Marine Insurance Company is hopelessly insolvent; that the judgments of Felix Saloman & Co. will be worthless unless execution and suggestions issue immediately therefor; that the assets of said company, to your affiant's information and belief, have been removed beyond the jurisdiction of this court and out of this state to defraud its creditors. That said Anchor Fire and Marine Insurance Company is a West Virginia corporation, and not authorized by law to do business in other states. S. G. SMITH.

Yesterday executions were issued and the company was closed up. It has been all along regarded as a wild cat concern. The organizer and secretary, C. E. Merwin, came here from Toledo. He did not stand well in regular insurance circles. Several weeks ago he left, and it was given out that he had gone to Detroit on account of serious illness. While here he lived in great style. The collapse has long been predicted by persons in a position to form an opinion. No assets can now be found except a little furniture.

Firemen's Tournament.

Yesterday was the first day of the firemen's tournament at Toronto and a big crowd was in attendance. There were a number of races on the programme, and Martin's Ferry, as usual in athletic events, was right at the front. In the foot race Peter Reddy, of Martin's Ferry, took first place, and Robert Edwards, of the same place, got second place and money. The parade took place in the morning and was a highly successful and brilliant one. Today is the big day and a large delegation will go up from Martin's Ferry.

A Brilliant Scene.

Last night a brilliant and unusual scene attracted general attention on Main street in the wholesale district. The Hicks & Hogg six story business block at the corner of Fourteenth street was lighted from top to bottom, and made a beautiful spectacle. The cause of this was the presence of a large contingent of the out-of-town customers of the firm in the city during the State Fair. Many of the latter visited and went through this immense establishment last evening.
